

Dr. Lauren Pilcher is a lecturer of film and media studies at Georgia College. They research US film and media related to the American South, particularly representations of gender and race in nontheatrical and documentary film. Currently, they are working on a project about government films produced in midcentury Georgia and their contemporary reverberations in state visual cultures.